

Employability and Careers

Drama

Skills You'll Gain from Studying Drama

Ability to speak/express yourself confidently in front of a group.

Ability to work as part of a team, offering ideas and listening to others.

Ability to lead a team, also to work independently with self-discipline.

Ability to empathise with others and their situation by taking on different roles.

Ability to use initiative, improvise and think creatively.

Physical co-ordination.

Develop performance skills including vocal and movement skills, as well as learning what is important when performing in front of an audience.

You will also learn how to behave as a member of an audience and to offer constructive feedback to other groups and individuals.

Potential Careers from Studying Drama

Acting, Community arts, Theatre in education, Dancing, drama/music therapy, Theatre directing, Primary, secondary and further education teaching, Arts administration, Broadcasting, Writing, Stage management, Technician, Law, Public relations, Sales, Video editing, Counselling, Journalism